

Long live March 8, International Women's Day!

One hundred and a few years have passed since the first annual celebration of International Women's Day, and the world has never seen women's rights being openly and brazenly violated to such an extent. The record of legal violation of women's rights, body and mind in the Islamized countries of Iran and Afghanistan has been broken by the Taliban regimes in Tehran and Kabul. Despite this description, the world has never seen such an all-out and bold effort of women from teenagers to the elderly in challenging misogynist rule. Women in other countries mainly fight for equal political, social and economic rights; In addition to that, in Iran and Afghanistan, women are fighting for the right to breathe freely in public spaces, away from the attacks of the Islamic Gestapo. In Iran, women's struggle with the birth of the Mahsa movement and the all-encompassing slogan of Woman Life Freedom side by side with men shook not only Iran, but the whole world. The Islamic regime saw its inevitable future in a few historical moments. The regime realized that the glass of its life has cracked under the firm steps of this movement and cannot be repaired in any way, and finally the glass of the life of the Islamic slavery system will be broken in the next sharp turn and with the joining of the women's emancipation movement with labor movements, intellectuals, students, retirees, Nurses and other hard working people will become a reality.

Although the fascist regime of Islamist ordered the suppression of this revolutionary movement with all its might and killed hundreds of people, captured thousands of people, did not fail to torture and rape and blind protesters to poisoning girls in schools. This regime has exposed its anti-human nature so much that the majority of the freedom-loving people of Iran and the world are counting the days for the burial ceremony of the Islamic fascism regime along with all its repressive apparatuses from the IRGC, Basij, courts, and Religious Institutions of propaganda, ignorance and demagoguery.

The women's emancipation movement will celebrate International Women's Day in Iran on March 8 this year with all its strength in every city and town, neighborhood in the best possible way. Abroad, women's emancipation activists will try to get the solidarity of free-willed people who want equality from the Woman Life Freedom movement by participating in marches and ceremonies on March 8 in their countries of residence.

Long live March 8, International Women's Day!

We will not settle for less than freedom and equality!
